Rape and Sexual Assault

Sexual Assault is a crime defined as intentional sexual contact, often characterized by use of force, physical threat or abuse of authority or when the victim does not or cannot consent. Sexual assault includes rape, non-consensual sodomy (oral or anal sex), indecent assault (unwanted, inappropriate sexual contact or fondling), or attempts to commit these acts. Sexual assault can occur without regard to gender, spousal relationship, or age of the victim.

Lack of physical resistance by the victim does not equal consent. Consent is not given when a person uses force, threat of force, coercion or when the victim is asleep, incapacitated or unconscious.

What should I expect? Why don't I feel like myself? How will I feel?

There is no "right way" to respond to a sexual assault. Responses can differ from day-to-day and from person-to-person.

Common feelings and reactions can include:

- Feelings of guilt, or that somehow you are to blame for the attack
- Fear and anxiety
- Mood swings
- Nightmares and flashbacks
- Appetite disturbances
- Fatigue and/or difficulty sleeping
- Poor concentration
- Intense feelings of shame and self-blame
- Depression and withdrawal
- Sense of numbness and/or disconnect- edness from the world, both physically and emotionally
- Bouts of rage, impatience and irritation
- Loss of a sense of privacy and control
- Loss of interest in sexual activity

It is important to remember that you are reacting normally to an abnormal situation.

It will take time and support to get back to feeling settled. These symptoms or feelings may go away after a few months, but it is possible that they may continue to affect your ongoing health or relationships. It is important to take care of yourself, and to get the support and care that you need.

RCVCC staff and volunteers are always on call to help victims and survivors of a violent crime.

How do I handle the reactions of others who learn about my sexual assault?

Comments by others may feel like criticism or blaming even the comments were not intended that way.

Facts to remember about sexual assault:

1. You did not consent
2. Nothing you did or did not do caused the assault
3. Responsibility for criminal behavior belongs to the offender

Your life has changed, but you will go forward in spite of the criminal behavior committed against you. You might choose to use this experience as an opportunity to confirm your personal strengths by holding your head up high, looking others in the eye, and holding the accused accountable for inappropriate behavior.
